YOOPER TALK: DIALECT AS IDENTITY IN MICHIGAN'S UPPER PENINSULA

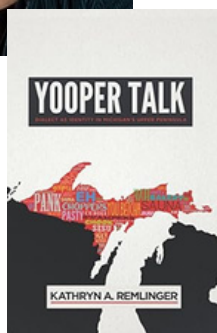

An evening with GVSU English professor and author Kathryn Remlinger

Tuesday, February 11 | 6:30 PM | Carnegie Room

The isolated and remote location of Michigan's Upper Peninsula has a unique dialect that helps to distinguish it from other American English dialects. Professor Kathryn Remlinger will examine and elaborate on the history of "Yooper Talk," and how a combination of the languages English, French, Finnish, Anishinaabemowin, and other languages influenced its development.

Physical copies of the book can be requested through the Michigan eLibrary at MeL.org. The ebook and digital audiobook can be found on www.hoopladigital.com. Books will be available for purchase at the event. Cash, check, and Venmo are accepted.

No registration required.
